Brief Recap of Trello

A diagram illustrating the Trello interface. It features a large central white rounded rectangle containing the word "list". Above it is a smaller white rounded rectangle containing the word "board". To the left of the "list" box is a vertical column of seven blue text items: "project management", "kanban boards", "deadlines", "checklists", "planning", "organization", and "team collaboration". The entire diagram is set against a dark blue background.

- project management
- kanban boards
- deadlines
- checklists
- planning
- organization
- team collaboration

Collaboration?

Profile

Andrew H.

Age: 21

Gender: Male

Occupation: Visual Media Intern

Goals

- Communicate deadlines with team
- Quickly note or list new project requirements
- Track progress of collaborative efforts
- To be able to have an application that stores information without too many clicks

Motivations

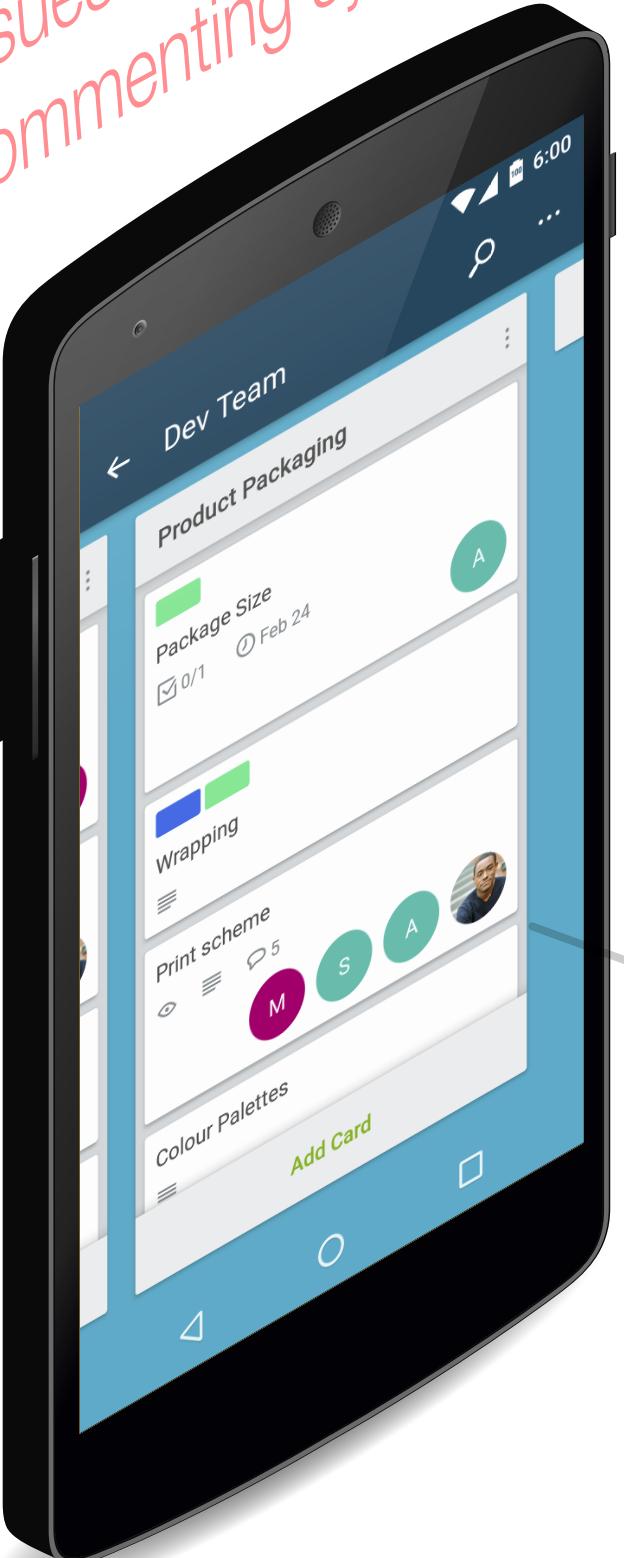

- Difficulty in trying to remember every task assigned without writing it down
- Document work in case of being held accountable by management

Frustrations

- Too many menus or clicks to access or note down something trivial
- Not being able to quickly navigate and access a what should be easy to find option or feature

Communication

Issues with current commenting system

Old replies can be hard to find

Impossible to dig through years of archived cards

Reverse
chronological ordering

Unintuitive for native
chat users

Comments only intended for cards

Limited to discussions of a narrow scope

Ahh it's been a while. It's hidden in one of these Trello cards but I forget which. I'll message you on Slack.

Just now

Andrew

Hey do you remember that comment you made about the design blog?
What was the link again

Andrew

Okay I guess I'll have to wait until Friday. In the meantime I'll double check the dimension.
